

A reflective exercise of the Nativity Questions you might ask the children – these are only ideas to help you get started!

Can you put the cards in the correct order and tell the story?

Do any of the cards show a character who might appear several times in the story i.e angels?

Which is your favourite picture and why? Do any of the cards make you feel happy or sad? If so why?

A lot of the Nativity story concerns journeys. What do you feel Mary and Joseph, the shepherds, the kings felt about the journey they were making?

There was no room at the inn, how did they feel when there seemed to be nowhere for them to stay?

The shepherds were lowly people and despised by others even though they provided sheep for the temple which was essential for Jewish life. The Kings were strangers from afar.

You can explore issues of superiority, racism, homelessness, journeys, exclusion, and more through the Christmas story.

Imagine you were an animal in the stable or one on the journey – what did you see.

The kings brought gifts and possibly the shepherds brought a lamb or a fleece what would you give to the baby Jesus.

A reflective exercise of the Nativity Questions you might ask the children – these are only ideas to help you get started!

Can you put the cards in the correct order and tell the story?

Do any of the cards show a character who might appear several times in the story i.e angels?

Which is your favourite picture and why? Do any of the cards make you feel happy or sad? If so why?

A lot of the Nativity story concerns journeys. What do you feel Mary and Joseph, the shepherds, the kings felt about the journey they were making?

There was no room at the inn, how did they feel when there seemed to be nowhere for them to stay?

The shepherds were lowly people and despised by others even though they provided sheep for the temple which was essential for Jewish life. The Kings were strangers from afar.

You can explore issues of superiority, racism, homelessness, journeys, exclusion, and more through the Christmas story.

Imagine you were an animal in the stable or one on the journey – what did you see.

The kings brought gifts and possibly the shepherds brought a lamb or a fleece what would you give to the baby Jesus.